1. Learn Agro-forestry online - Forest Heroes -

Forest Heroes is the central online community of the KETSO learning ecosystem. It brings together Sierra Leoneans at home and in the diaspora who want to learn about trees, climate, agroforestry, land restoration and community development. Through weekly live sessions, challenges, discussions and practical assignments, participants build knowledge step by step while documenting their progress through the KETSO AI-supported upload system. Forest Heroes is open to everyone and forms the shared foundation from which participants can continue into more specialized streams.

2. Vocational training in Agro-forestry and digital skills - Green Makombeh

Green Makombeh is KETSO's vocational field training program based in Makombeh, Sierra Leone. The program combines agroforestry, entrepreneurship and digital skills through practical hands-on learning. Participants work directly with nurseries, tree planting, land restoration and sustainable agriculture while also developing leadership and business skills. The training is designed for motivated young people between 16 and 24 years old who are willing to commit to long-term practical learning and community development.

3. Certificate courses: Arboriculture, Tree Rehabilitation - Tik Master Sabi Person

Tik Master Sabi Person is KETSO's advanced certificate stream focused on professional tree knowledge, arboriculture and ecosystem restoration. Participants follow structured distance-learning modules supported by videos, written materials, assignments and AI-assisted feedback through the KETSO uploader platform. The stream begins with Arboriculture and later continues into Trees for Rehabilitation. The goal is to develop highly skilled tree experts who understand both technical tree care and the long-term restoration of degraded landscapes.

4. Access to grants and funds - Green Osusu

Green Osusu is KETSO's fundraising, investment and project development stream. Inspired by the traditional West African concept of collective financial cooperation, the program teaches participants how to support environmental and community projects through fundraising, proposal development, diaspora engagement and impact-oriented investment thinking. The stream includes both donor fundraising and investment-focused pathways, helping participants turn environmental ideas into financially supported initiatives.

5. Advocacy and Networking - Climate Clock Man

Climate Clock Man is KETSO's advocacy and environmental awareness stream. The program focuses on climate communication, storytelling, public awareness and community engagement around environmental change in Sierra Leone and beyond. Participants use videos, discussions, interviews and online campaigns to explore how climate change, land degradation and environmental management affect everyday life. The stream encourages critical thinking, observation and responsible communication while building a network of informed environmental voices.
